

Beginning Sept 2011, the EU is funding a 2 year education project between Southwark, London and the Algarve region.

The 'REGIO' project links us to share experience and training around teaching classes of pupils from many different cultural backgrounds...

- Joint conferences will support the building of links and the sharing of good practice.
- Teachers from both regions will be supported to job shadow in schools in their partner region.
- Goldsmiths Educational Studies and the Lagos Teacher Training Centre Dr Rui Gracio will collaborate to deliver training for schools.

How can we best --teach the range of nationalities coming into our classrooms?

--train teachers to promote understanding and global citizenship?

--teach the development of language and languages as tools for inclusion in the modern, multicultural classroom?
